Daddy's Girl

a: TheEvangelion

28/02/2017

Completed

She's naked, and that shouldn't be enough to make her blush, she's been naked for Lexa more times than she can count in places that were far less appropriate than their playroom. But that was just it, in this room they weren't Clarke and Lexa, were they? They were something else.

There was a shift in the dynamic and Clarke played the role of the needy submissive until it was no longer a role but just a fractal of who she was, and Lexa became her punishing heavy-handed daddy, there to guide and ruin her in all the ways that had her coming undone and unwinding from the stresses of the week.

Dance in the Lion's Den

a: Tanagariel

29/07/2016

Completed

Lexa Woods, young entrepreneur, has forged herself of steel. She sees life as something that has to be survived. Closing off her feelings she fights to be the best, even when she feels so alone. Moving through life without hope and a relationship that is not enough, Lexa will find herself attracted to a woman who will turn her world upside down.

Clarke Griffin, a professional dancer, who has lost so much yet hopes that dance won't ever leave her behind, keeps fighting to live her life to the fullest, even in her loneliness. She will find that sometimes looks deceive and that she shouldn't be so quick to judge a book by its cover. Particularly when it's someone as aloof and cold as Lexa.

The businesswoman and the dancer will clash in a battle of wits and stubbornness, fighting the other until there is only one left. Except that on their dance journey, their feelings will begin to change and their life won't ever be the same; now the only thing left is to see if they can dance in the lion's den.

She shifted in the stretcher and froze. There, standing regally outside of the Mammoth sized door to Mount Weather was the most gorgeous woman Clarke had ever seen. Her head, no longer foggy with exhaustion took stock of every detail it could.

Her posture was ram-rod straight and all of the Grounders stayed behind her unless they were doing actual work. Her chin tipped up to exaggerate a truly sharp jawline that disappeared into thick wavy brown hair, braided intricately. She turned her head and suddenly the most green eyes she'd ever seen were locked on hers.

All marveled with great devotion as they watched the mighty alpha Commander of the thirteen clans, Lexa, and her omega mate, Costia, stroll through the high wooden double doors into the massive throne room. Their arms linked together as always as they entered the place of impending importance. A room in which any and all decisions that effected each and every one of their lives was made. Where ceremonies of tradition and celebrations were held. Where powers were both given and taken away. Where some, had spent the very last of their days. It was indeed the most sacred of all the locations within the capital. And it was here, that many, if not all of Lexa's major life changes had occurred. Little did she know that today, would be one of those days.

They were flanked by their most loyal gonakru (warriors), as well as their favorite hangada (handmaiden) and friend, Clarke. A girl whom was gifted to Lexa and Costia as a means of goodwill from the leader of the Skaikru (Sky people), Abby.

"It's not my job to settle." Clarke retorts resentful, "sometimes I wish we were back on the Ark. It was easier then."

She regrets the words as soon as they are out of her mouth, but when she bends down to grab him, Alistair scurries quickly between her feet, lithe form dodging her graceless attempt at restraining him.

He races to the other side of the tent and climbs onto the folding table Raven made for Clarke.

"Oh I'm sorry," he hisses when she tries to edge closer, fur puffing up with his displeasure, "if I am an inconvenience. I was here even before you know? Just because you couldn't see your soul doesn't mean you didn't have one."

There is a secret test hidden within the SAT. This test does not measure a student's aptitude at reading, writing and arithmetic; it measures a student's ability to lie, cheat, fight and kill. Those who score well are recruited into a secret paramilitary academy. Some call them seductresses, some call them spies. Fools call them innocent. They call themselves: D.E.B.S.

Clarke Griffin is recruited into D.E.B.S academy after receiving a perfect score on the D.E.B.S aptitude test. A few years later, she is second in command in one of the most respected D.E.B.S units around, a team made up of 4 best friends: Bellamy Blake, Octavia Blake, Raven Reyes and Clarke Griffin.

But now, after years in hiding, notorious super villain Lexa Diamond returns to the United States and appears to be making her move: D.E.B.S uncover she is attending a meeting with a master assassin and are sent to investigate.

What Clarke truly uncovers about Lexa Diamond, however, will be more than she ever bargained for.

Letting her eyes drift from her sibling and scan the shore, Lexa finds herself smiling. People watching has never really been her thing, but seeing a mom repeatedly try to show her screaming toddler the sea isn't as scary as he thinks makes her rethink that. She watches kids playing with a ball on the shallow end, letting it skitter on the water and retrieving it before it gets too far. She watches a middle aged man leaving the water with a speedo far too tight to leave anything to the imagination – she looks away quickly, because oh boy. She watches tweens braiding their wild hair, young boys building sand castles, bored women turning pages on their books.

She's moving from person to person, content to just let the waves bob her up and down as she finds the next interesting thing going on at the packed beach.

Then her eyes catch something odd – camera lenses, pointed directly at her.

"Why would you want me to tell you about her?"

She shrugged. "Because we're sitting in the dark during a thunderstorm and my phone is about to die. What else are we going to do to pass the time?"

"What is there to even tell?"

"Everything! I wanna know how you guys met, how you became friends, what happened between you two, all of it. That was a huge part of your life and I wanna know," she said, and then she clasped her hands together in front of her. "Please?"

"Fine," Lexa sighed again as she started to run her fingers through her hair, and she began to recall the old memories. "The first time I ever met her was in first grade..."

Lexa recalls the old memories of her and Clarke, from becoming friends to best friends, to the confusion and jealousy that almost tore them apart, to revealing true feelings and regrets, up to the very end.

The girl had blonde hair that would shine like gold when the sun would come through the window of the classroom at a certain angle. Upon further inspection Lexa had noticed how blue her eyes were, deep and endless like the ocean, one of the most enchanting things you could ever possibly see. Thy teacher put them in groups to organize a presentation of the latest book the class was assigned to read. And that was when Lexa had realized how hopelessly screwed she was. Clarke Griffin-

Clarke is hurting.

Clarke's heart bleeds red for every person she killed at Mount Weather.

She wanders alone in the woods, facing her demons.

She doesn't deserve to live, but she not ready to die.

At least, not yet.

However, fate has different plans. Roan kom Azgeda captures her, and brings her before the one person that she never wanted to see again.

Lexa kom Trikru-

Lexa is crumbling.

Lexa's heart bleeds black for every time she chooses her head over her heart.

She sits on her throne, commanding an army she did not ask for, worrying over problems that should have never existed in the first place.

She decides to take the matters into her own hands.

No longer will fate control her. She will find Clarke one way or another, even if she cannot leave Polis.

It takes Clarke and Lexa too long to realized that they bleed the same, regardless of their bloods.

On the fifth anniversary of her father's death, Clarke ran away to their old secret space in memoriam of all she had lost. Only, inclement weather and treacherous river conditions prevented her from making it that far. Lexa hadn't meant to wander so deep off the trail, but she was never one to turn down a good dare, critical storm warnings be damned. If Anya had told her that she would be saving someone's life that day—namely, Clarke Griffin—she definitely wouldn't have believed her.

She was going to give up on using the app entirely, until she stumbled upon the profile of a 21-year-old alpha female whom coincidentally was attending the same college as her and was majoring in game design. In her profile picture she had the greenest eyes, long brown hair that was all spilling over one shoulder, wore black rimmed glasses, and had this really shy but captivating smile and look about her that Clarke just couldn't keep her attention away from.

Her short bio talked about how she was into gaming, comics, movies, scented candles, flowers, and just looking for someone who gets her. Clarke wasn't sure if they'd connect much, considering Clarke had never dated anyone who was remotely nerdy/geeky before, but something kept telling her to swipe right, so she did.

"Okay, good," Clarke nods, apparently not discouraged in the least by her tone. She simply shrugs and takes a sip from her mug before settling it on the counter, cupping it in between her palms. "I've been here for almost a year and I haven't seen you be anything if not punctual so I thought I'd ask."

"I'm fine. I overslept, that's all," Lexa says in a curt tone, because she's really not in the mood to talk about it. Lexa takes another sip from her coffee before meeting Clarke's gaze again, her voice a little softer this time, "Thank you. For covering for me."

Dreaming About You

Dreams aren't supposed to feel this realistic right? At least she's not waking up to nightmares of the people she's let down.

"When I wake up, how do I know if it's real or if I'm still dreaming?"

"Am I in your dreams?"

"Yeah but it's different. We're all different."

"Ask dream me to protect you, then."

Or sort of normal Clexa but when Clarke goes to sleep she experiences something weird.

For as long as she could remember Costia has had the dreams.

Dreams of greens and browns mixing with shades of grey blending into red-browns and grey-blacks. Trees growing next to bricks and stones stacked against metal. The landscape never seemed to make sense to Costia.

But then, dreams in the soul were supposed to reflect the merging point of your soulmate's soul and your own.

Except Costia had two.
