Part 1 of Fading Bright Eyes Dark

Clarke isn't happy about being partnered with a complete stranger when her 4.2 GPA is at stake, but she does her best to make the most of it because, well, what other choice does she have? What she didn't expect was the intense curiosity and instant attraction that she felt for this new girl...

Lexa is the new girl and is partnered up with Clarke for a writing assignment on her first day at her new school. She's not here to make friends, but there's something about Clarke and her misfit group of friends that makes her feel comfortable to be herself. But if her dark past has taught her anything, it's that she can't trust anyone, not even the pretty blue eyed blonde who keeps invading her every waking thought.

01/04/2017

Last update: 01/04/2017

In the 1800's there's a bloody battle which predates the civil war between two enemies; a dangerous little thing with her own castle and people - Lexa - and the bloody queen of the north with an army of savages - Nia. And this is when Lexa learns evil witches can't be defeated without receiving a parting gift.

Centuries later, a med student living in a tiny town has her own battle; she will do anything to find a cure for the mysterious illness which grips her mother. Even if it means venturing to a set of ruins deep within the woods.

"It is the story of her namesake, is it not?"

Clarke sighs. "Yes, but children want to be comforted, coddled, told sweet things..." She's looking at the child in Lexa's arms with concern.

"The world is not always sweet, Clarke."

"You're right, and no one knows that better than us, but- here, may I have her?" She puts her arms out, a hopeful, expectant expression on her face.

Lexa looks taken aback. This is the first time Clarke has shown any interest in caring for the younger Nightblood children- they always seemed to make her uncomfortable, or nervous. But Lexa hands Clarke the upset little girl, leaning over to transfer her into the strong, soft arms of her lover.

"There we go," Clarke whispers.

Costia quiets, intrigued by the new face.

"Hello, Costia." Clarke grins down at the curious eyes, "I'm Clarke." She looked up at Lexa's sleepy smile and added, "I'm in love with Lexa."

"I am assuming you did not get in the text that I would be a woman too?" of course this seemed to annoy Lexa as she turned to the man. "Lincoln I thought you would have let her know this fact".

Before Lincoln could respond Clarke butted in, "hey it's no problem I thought it was a well-known fact I'm bisexual". Honestly she was surprised at the gender, but this did not seem to be much of a problem for her; any gender it would have been awkward in the first meeting.

Last update: 20/07/2017

It's the first day of junior year in high school when Clarke decides that she wants to stand out in her slightly unconventional high school. You'd think that Polis High would be like every other generic high school where being a jock, cheerleader, or fashionably adept would boost your popularity, right? Well, you're wrong. Polis High wants everyone to embrace their inner uniqueness and not be afraid to actually be who they are. The only problem for Clarke is that she's completely ordinary and doesn't have anything that'll make her well known. She isn't the type of person to give up after realizing she won't succeed, so she comes up with a plan that she's sure will get everyone's attention. She's going to ask Lexa, her best friend since kindergarten, to pretend to be her girlfriend.

For Clexa Week 2018 -

Clarke and her BFF Raven take a nostalgia-fueled trip to Christmasy Sky Lodge for a little skiing, a little relaxation and the occasional snowy mishap.

Fortunately for Clarke's sometimes clumsy self, there is a gorgeous Search and Rescue volunteer always around - but she has no idea how close they might be getting, thanks to some serious winter weather.

"I want rescue babe to give me a long, slow rub down and cook for me and wash my hair and eat me out until I die. Is that so wrong? Am I asking for too much?"

Settling herself on the bed, Raven patted her knee.

Many years ago a warrior discovered a strange object lying in the crater, and inside of it was a unconscious little girl with blonde hair and blue eyes.

Now that girl sits on the Azgeda throne. But all around her, dark forces are gathering and threatening to end her reign and also her life, plunging the world into a perfect storm of swords and blood.

Down south, Polis is gripped in fear as one clan wishes to destroy the fragile Coalition, so Heda is forced to look for other alliances, even in the north. But in the shadows, hidden from sight, people are making their own moves, aiming to exploit the turbulent times ahead.

Peace is again just a memory, who will prevail in this deadly dance of war and betrayal; who is worth trusting in times when trust can stab you in the back?

When chaos still rung loudly between their people and she thought her heart belonged to a lost boy with floppy hair.

If she were being honest, her heart leapt into the werewolf's hands the minute their eyes met in that tent months ago. Even after Lexa's betrayal, the feeling remained, no matter how hard to she fought to sate herself from it. It lived. It breathed. Lexa groans. "To meet up with Clarke."

"Ah, Clarke," Savannah sighs dramatically. "How long have I been telling you to go for it? Two years? Since the time she stayed late your freshman year just to watch your first ever Certamen round?"

"Yes, yes, you're very perceptive," Lexa grumbles as they reach her locker. Savannah moves to lean against the locker next to her, facing the hallway.

"I just want to see you two together before I graduate. It's, like, literally my only goal in life."

Clarke, Lexa, and our usual band of suspects share their lives with us once more, this time the introduction begins their day-to-day in Polis High, where they all begin as freshmen.

They will share their experiences, their successes and their hopes and dreams with us while they navigate into young adulthood and eventually College and beyond! This includes finding adult jobs, marriage, families, vacations and the joy that comes with it all.

Of course, with life it isn't all perfect and our favourite characters will run into road blocks.

They will stumble personally, professionally, and they will have scars from the events that unfold. I promise that none of those events will be earth shattering, but they are people and as such inevitable disappointment and sadness will happen, but it will only help to reinforce the good that comes of it.

For most of my life, my family has vacationed in the same place. There's this town in the mountains, small and quaint but pretty as all be. In the summer, it's full of bees and horses and soft coatings of pollen. Meadows and trails and jumping in the river. Come fall, the leaves all turn colors, the air grows crisp. More riding and hiking, but with less humidity and sweats stains. In the winter, the mountain ices over. Snow and skiing, tubing and snowball fights. For 12 years we visited at one point or another, every year. Dad traveled for work and wasn't ever certain when he would be home. So, when he finished one contract, we would all pile into the car and drive up there for a week. Lexa's death was staged. Lexa had nothing to do with it, and the culprit, the mastermind behind all of it, is the least likely person - Costia. She did it to save Lexa's life.

Clarke knows none of this. Clarke, thinking Lexa is dead, is only barely alive herself - nothing matters to her any more, the weight of the deaths she has caused only increases with each death she has to witness, and she can no longer hold the weight.

But she does. She perseveres in honor of Lexa, pushes herself to fight not only the grounders but her own people; because they're both wrong, Clarke sees this, Clarke just wants the war to end, and does all she can to finish it, once and for all.

But underground, in hidden tunnels, Lexa is alive, and healing.

And one day, they'll meet again.

Clarke sat on the countertop of the caravan with the razor in hand. The five year old scooted up closer and steadied herself. She put her little hands on her mother's face and began to shave away the beard. She had begged her mother to let her try it out. At first Abby was hesitant, but she didn't see the harm.

Her daughter was a gentle kind soul, and knew that she just wanted to find a way to be helpful.

"Done !" the young blonde announced.

Abby smiled, "Thank you, honey."

"You're welcome, Mama." the little girl leaned in and gave her mother a hug.

"Go on, and check on everyone else, okay ?"

The little girl nodded, leapt off the countertop, and ran out the caravan.

Clarke loves Lexa.

She loves her in Washington when they are young and reckless and forever hand-in-hand.

She loves her in war where they can't escape the nightmares or the stench of blood but at least they have each other.

She loves her after death, after the memories are all tinged with grief, after seventy years of sleeping and still she wakes up crying.

And she loves her when she's no longer herself, when she's dead-eyed and says Clarke's name like a question and she moves like a weapon with purpose and Clarke still adores her.

What do you do if the future love of your life seems to be an annoying woman with a questionable lifestyle?

What do you do if your soulmate seems to be a judgemental, living on her high horse kind of woman?

You hate each other.

That's right.

That's what you do... until hate isn't quite what you would describe to feel for each other anymore.

It has been three years since Lexa crushed the Ice Nation and avenged Costia's death.

It has been three years since Lexa came into possession of a block of ice containing a young woman with blonde hair.

It has been three years but something that the Ice Queen said before her death still worries Lexa.

"She will wake up when the stars fall, and when she does she will bring ruin to everything."

Part 1 of Full House

Abby Griffin and Marcus Kane have seen countless children come through their home when they have nowhere else to go. After losing her first husband Jake to a car accident when their daughter was only 5 years old, Abby devoted her life to something Jake would have been so proud of, fostering and caring for children. A paediatrician, Abby knew nothing else than helping kids in their time of need. Clarke, now 17 and in her last year of high school was used to the revolting door but cherished those who came into their home and never left. Across the street as they unpacked the mountain of boxes in front of them, the Woods family were still coming to terms with the catastrophic change they were all facing. Eldest child Lexa was 18 and now legally responsible for her two sisters and three brothers after their parents serving in the Army were both killed by a suicide bomber in Baghdad. Lexa had stepped up to care for her siblings but it didn't come without its challenges. One challenge might be the blonde girl across the street.

Clarke had many regrets. Worst of all is not being able to save the girl she loves the most and even more is not telling her that she loves her. What if she found a chance to do it over again? At what lengths would she go to correct her mistakes and get the happily ever after that she wants? Because she now realises that her 'Maybe someday' would never come if Lexa isn't by her side.
