<https://archiveofourown.org/works/14172324>

Harbinger

a: DreamsAreMyWords

03/03/2019

Completed

It's so much colder than she anticipates, the pressure around her pushing in like tiny pinpricks that remind her of the sewing needles her mother used to accidentally jab her with while measuring her gowns. By the time her toes drift through the sand, bringing her to a halt, it feels as though she's been stabbed a thousand times. She opens eyes that sting with the salt water and struggles against her bonds. It's no use. She has nothing left but prayers to gods she barely believes in- prayers for forgiveness for what she did to her parents, and prayers no woman after her will suffer this way. The world around her darkens. Either the light from the surface is faint or her vision is already clouding black.

And then it isn't. Gold swims across her vision, gleaming hair that billows in the water, and whatever breath left in her is lost with it. Her head spins with disbelief as a familiar voice cuts through the water.

"What use are empty prayers?" Whispers curl around her, as comforting as they are terrifying. "The gods of the seas are myths. I am a harbinger, and now you are the death they asked for."

<https://archiveofourown.org/works/17909672>

Harbingers of Destruction

a: orphan_account

05/01/2017

Last update: 26/08/2018

After the fall of the mountain, Clarke left her people. She couldn't stay there and face all the people she saved at the cost of all those in that god forsaken mountain, so Clarke ran. Ran from her people, from Lexa and her demons, however the last thing wasn't so easily to out run as Clarke had hoped. It wasn't ideal, but Clarke had spent three months in the wilderness by herself and slowly but surely Clarke healed. With her newfound companion and horse, Clarke journeys south, not caring or knowing what she might find. On her journey, Clarke discovers new things and mostly that a new threat that could potentially spill doom over every one in the coalition and her people and a few things Clarke did not suspect and the path it will lead her on.

Clarke must ask herself one question, is she prepared to accept the role destiny has given her as 'Wanheda'?

Rage is familiar. She welcomes it. "No, it's that unfathomable." She's pretty proud of herself for pronouncing that word. "And cruel." Here it is.

"Cruel," Lexa says, as if tasting the word. She nods.

"After everything that's happened between us, it's cruel," she whispers, "so cruel of you to say that when it's not true." Because it's not, and that's exactly why she's sitting here, in an empty bar at three in the morning, drowning her thoughts in whiskey. "Clarke, this is my girl- my fiancée." Costia links their hands, hiding her face on her fiancée's shoulder and chuckling as the woman looks at her with a fond smile, "I'm still getting used to it. This is Lexa."

Lexa.

For a moment, Clarke takes her in, wondering what are the odds that two people have the same unusual name in the same small town. Because the woman who gave her a ride yesterday, with her polished looks and sly smirk, can't be the same giddy woman standing in front of her with an honest to God cowboy hat on her head.

But something about her eyes- fuck.

If her hair was tucked into a neat low bun, if winged eyeliner was complimenting her green eyes- fuck.

Reaching out her hand for Lexa to take, Clarke hurries to think of something to say, but the woman - Costia's fiancée - beats her to it. "We've met before, actually," Lexa's voice is composed as she shakes Clarke's hand, like it's not a big deal that they met before.

Forcing a smile and a polite nod, Clarke sighs because truthfully, it is not that big of a deal. If Clarke was smitten by her kindness and quick wit, that's her own problem and she'll have to deal with it on her own.

Clarke Griffin is an assistant art gallery curator by day, and a purveyor of vigilante justice by night. After her team fumbles a job and sets off a security alarm, she makes a break for the getaway car and jumps in.

Only it's not the right car. Instead of Octavia's familiar blue-green eyes and sharp jawline, she comes face-to-face with the mesmerising green eyes and soft features of a woman she doesn't know. She's pretty as hell though, and that makes Clarke feel bold enough to take a chance.

If anything she could say she was amused by the Sky person standing before her, holding her gaze with equally intense green eyes. Even though she'd be loath to admit that to anyone.

She saw the moment the girl's resolve built up just before she replied with a raise of her chin, "You are the one who sent them there to kill us."

This story is about Clarke Griffin, who has heterochromia, a rare birth defect that makes multi-colored eyes. She lived a very realistic life. Never cared much for horoscopes or things of that matter. She thought they were a load of bullshit. She looked at her life through the eyes of logic instead of dreams and old folklore tales and whatnot. Yes kind of boring, but according to Clarke, the best way as to not set yourself up for failure.

Her heterochromia has been with her all of her life. It doesn't define her, but she does love it. I mean who wouldn't love having two different colored eyes? Seeing the face on her homochromatic peers when they notice is something she really enjoys. Being different makes her stand out in a good way.

Clarke was very happy. She had her amazing best friend Raven Reyes and her wonderful boyfriend Finn.

Then a new person joins their little group. A new girl named Octavia and later a friend of hers from another school Lexa, a heterochromatic like Clarke. Things you may or may not expect come from this Clarke loves her mother. She really does. But, since the death of her father, there hasn't been a moment between the two of them that hasn't ended in heated arguments and slammed doors. She doesn't know what to do, but she know she has to do something, or else she'll go crazy.

Lexa loves her father. She really does. But the divorce has left him unrecognizable, and her mother's as oblivious as ever. There's nothing she can do but endure. She's good at it, though, and Costia helps, she always has. But everything changes when Costia dies. Now, the only relief in her life, the only good thing, is gone. She doesn't know what to do, but she know she has to do something, before it all ends in disaster.

The solution comes in the form of a soccer ball to the face, literally.
When they truly meet and get to know each other, hope sparks. Let's just hope this flame doesn't go out before they've reached their destiny.

Clarke sets out to meet her ex Finn for a casual hookup but there are three problems: the first is that, thanks to a bet she lost with Octavia, she has to wear a ridiculous sexy Santa costume. The second is that Finn gave her the wrong address, and she's definitely just accidentally broke into a stranger's home. The third is that said stranger happens to be a gorgeous woman, and she just passed out upon walking through the door and laying eyes on that Good Christmas Cleavage.

"What's wrong?" That sleepy gravel is still there, and Clarke loves it. "Did I do something? Is this about last night? Are you hurting?"

'No.' Clarke slowly shakes her head, side to side. 'I just, feel so safe with you.' She doesn't vocalize it, but her mind and heart share the same page as it reads itself into her consciousness. Because it was true. She did feel safe, all because of the one sharing this bed with her right now.

When Aden opened the door, he was met by a big man. He was slightly taller and bigger than his uncle, with short dark brown hair and a stubble beard. He wore a pair of aviator glasses, a Hawaiian shirt with parrots on it and underneath a dirty white shirt. He also wore a pair of jeans and black athletic sneakers. From underneath his right sleeve poked a tattoo that the kid immediately recognized as the one his mother had on the same arm. Even Uncle L and Auntie Anya had it too. "Hello sir. How can I help you?". The man smiled and crouched down to be on his eye level. "Hello Aden. It's been a while". The kid took a step back, starting to get scared. "You know my name?". The man smiled even more. "Well yeah. I'm your uncle Anton".

After five years spent in prison, Anton Woods comes back home hoping to get close again with his family. His nephews may be tough to handle, his siblings may doubt him and his parents may be not too forgiving but if prison has taught him something is that if you want that something, you have to fight for it. First step, and it cannot be stressed enough how important this is, your eyeliner needs to be on point.

Well, ok, maybe the first step is actually meeting a girl who isn't a decomposed walker trying to eat you, but that should be a given. Lexa hopes that's a given. If it's not, you're probably beyond help at this point anyway.

She had shed her human self in favor for her wolf self, to run away from the decisions of her brain vs her heart. She needed to run away from the corpses, from the grief that threatened to crush her chest. Lexa was right. They all made sacrifices to protect the ones they love. War makes monsters out of them all.

Or

Lexa tries to calm a fully transformed Clarke from ripping out her throat. Who thought the Sky Princess could make such a magnificent wolf?

Anya hesitated, turning the assertion over, examining it for cracks of insincerity or perhaps even an outright lie. Finally, she nodded, satisfied, and the smile she directed at Lexa might have been blinding, except she still looked worn out. "Guess that makes you the big cheese of everyone, then."

"Then what does that make everyone else?"

Anya slid down into the seat again and her eyes fell shut once more. "I dunno. Kraft slices?" And finally, Lexa smiled.

Yeah, pick on someone your own size.

Unfortunately, there was no one her own size anymore.

"Lexa was listening to music as usual, this time it was a musical. But instead of the usual quiet she is used to from Clarke, she could hear humming.

Clarke was humming to the song Lexa was listening to and Lexa was shocked to say the least for two reasons.

One, this is the first she heard anything from her. Two, she also likes musicals.

Without really thinking, Lexa took one of her earbuds and offered it to Clarke.

Clarke's eyes widen slightly and hesitated

Lexa thought she messed up again, but then Clarke took it. Lexa gave her the biggest smile"

Lexa's late bloomer. She's already a senior but her body was like an elementary. She's fat; her hair's frizzy and all over the place; her face was full of freckles and she had a bucked tooth.

Clarke is the total opposite; she's pretty with a body that looked like the goddess herself sculpted it. She's also smart and talented. She's the campus crush.

Lexa's been crushing on Clarke but she can only do so from a distance.

Clarke wanted Lexa to be her friend but her reputation's and image is much more important for her.

An unimaginable event happened before high school graduation that left Lexa broken.

But ten years later... they met again.
