Naivety is natural

Anya lives. She and Lexa have a much closer relationship than in canon. Everyone gets a little angst and a lotta lovin'. Clarke, Octavia and Raven are all refugees, banished from the ark, and they were the only ones sent down to date.

This will be the tale of how Clarke and her girls learn about the grounders, life on Earth, and how Lexa and Anya have been searching for their 3rd mate (acceptable, if not that common in grounder culture). Clarke just happens to fit the bill, but everyone is just a silly puppy.

Part 3 of Ameliorate

There's a point in many relationships when something changes, hopefully in a good way, and Clarke and Lexa's happens three months into their new start in New York City, when Lexa is about to start her third year of college - her first at New York University. It's been years that they've been together, but somehow, this is a new beginning. And not just for Clarke and Lexa, but for all of their friends and family. They aren't the same people they left behind in Polis, Virginia - no, they're stronger now, wiser, and ready to take on whatever the world hurls at them, together.

Clarke remembers the old history books on The Ark, the ones that humanity had managed to save, remembers learning about battles thousands of years old, and how the commanders would sit on a high hill above the chosen battlefield and watch the men below fight and die for them. Lexa is no such commander. As Clarke watches her charge down the hill at the head of her vanguard, she wishes fervently that that was one battle tactic that had survived the reformation of society.

Lexa is badly injured following a battle and Clarke must help her navigate the inevitable fallout.

Part 1 of Maybe Life Should Be About more Than Just Surviving

The oxygen problem on the Ark was discovered way sooner. Plans were forged and actions were taking place. But plans never last long in the course of actions. At the end, a blue-eyed, blonde baby ends up alone on earth. Her blood as black as the night.

Or maybe it's just the beginning....

AU in which Lexa and the Twelve Clans are a vampire society, living secretly in the modern world while Clarke is just a young woman trying to figure out her life as she interns with her mom at the hospital.

Clarke is a Natrona - a traitor to her people after murdering Dante Wallace, the chancellor's father to save her own.

When Chancellor Cage Wallace brands her a criminal and wants her head her mom has her smuggled onto the dropship. Everyone thinks her dead except the delinquents but when the Ark lands she has to go on the run and live wild and alone.

When she is captured by the Heda's warriors, instead of putting her to use, the strategic Heda senses an opportunity and keeps her as her own prisoner because of her vital knowledge about her newest ally, the Sky people.

A canon divergence au where Lexa is all business and no feelings, Clarke is a criminal on the run from her own people and Mount Weather's characters were all from the Ark instead.

their jobs. However, when a new Santa comes in, he overhauls how they work independently, demanding that they fuse to make a team. With them being arch nemeses since childhood, can they overcome their differences to help each other out?

Or,

Lexa and Clarke have to work together to find out why so many children are on the naughty list and end up getting more than what they bargained for.

Go past the dead zone, into the thick treed forest and you'll find a camp surrounded by a fence. This metal fence protects many things; people, huts, food. Inside this fence you'll find one certain person. A woman that holds the seven seas in her eyes, hair like all the gold in the world, seen as a beauty to most and a friend to all (give or take a few people... maybe take all). For her name is Clarke Griffin. But there's more to her than her beauty. She has the curiosity of a child, the looks of Aphrodite, and the adventurous nature of... someone who adventures? Dora?

Clarke Griffin has a dream that most wouldn't even consider. For her dream is forbidden among the camp people. She wishes to see the outside world. To live beyond the fence. Most in the camp would want her to leave considering all the trouble she has caused... anyways, on a bright and sunny morning it was announced Clarke would be marrying her childhood friend, Wells Jaha. "That's a big step in life", she would think as she gazed beyond the fence. For this step was a step Clarke didn't want to take. A step she couldn't take. She has to do something. Was this her chance to make her dream come true? Would she finally be leaving Camp Jaha... for good?

She had struck hard and fast, aiming for the center of the vampire's chest but instead of the silver stake ending the monstrosity's evil existence, it crumpled into dust in her hands. Her eyes widen in disbelief. The devilish gorgeous smirk erupting from the girl confirms her suspicion.

"Oh, this is going to be interesting...soulmate." Although taken aback with the current situation, the vampire had the guts to gloat. "Now you are bonded to me my dear slayer."

But why is there a tinge of disappointment in those alluring vampiric eyes?

It can't be, the slayer thinks. It cannot be. She has to avenge her cousin. Even if her chest pumps erratically inside her ribcage.

When Lexa Woods first started working, she was determined, driven, and ready to take on anyone that stood in her way. Now, after seven years of climbing up the corporate ladder, the newly appointed CEO is about to embark on her next endeavor for Trigeda Brands. The company's financial stability has the flexibility to do so. It should be simple, right? Wrong. Especially when the person designing the newest branch office just so happens to be a long-time, personal friend of hers; Clarke Griffin, Washington DC's brightest triple threat. Clarke is an artist with a cunning smiling and deft hands, a graphic designer with a keen eye for shapes and angles, and an architect with a sharp intuition for knowing exactly what to say to reduce the normally stoic business woman into a stuttering fool. In fact, she'd been doing it for years now. Oh! Did she fail to mention that she and Clarke are dating? So yeah, there's that...

What if Polaris became the 13th station of the Ark?

"Their hands met, separated by the glass wall, as Clarke's wild eyes sought refuge in Lexa's, her northern star, her true north. They were so close. Raven had been certain she'd be able to figure it out before Clarke's birthday. But they were too late. Clarke hadn't been pardoned and Raven hadn't solved the problem. Lexa felt her heart being torn from her chest, confronted by the fact that she was about to watch the person she loved more than anything in the world, get pushed out into space, air sucked from her lungs."

Clarke Griffin and Lexa Woods met on Unity Day, eight months before Clarke's eighteenth birthday. They had eight months of falling in love and growing happy. Of finding out the truth behind the 13th station that made up the Ark, Lexa's home station of Polaris. A truth that led to Clarke finding herself in an airlock, about to be floated for crimes against the government. Crimes of truth that she did not commit alone.

The beginning of each chapter covers the time: BC ~ Before Clarke. I'm tempted to give you details, but I can't, sorry. My thoughts were going back before the beginning of Lexa's first introduction on the flop (the 100 tv show) and give a story to the Trikru people and culture from an ABO POV. At some point, the chapters will have caught up to the present time and no longer be the case. Although I might go back further in later chapters before she came to Polis, This may not make much sense right now, but after the first chapter, you'll get my drift. Leave me questions in the comments, and I'll try to explain better.'

She had never been here before. There were maybe similar situations but none hurt as much as this. None hurt as much as she cried a few tears as she felt the air getting heavy in the lungs as she deeply inhaled, thinking over and over the situation. Was she going to come back? Was that it? Was that the end of us? The questions increased and intensified as she felt the breaths getting sharper and shorter as her hands were sweating heavily and shook against her knees, curled against her chest, tapping her fingers quickly.

Notting Hill AU

a: Outofthegarden

01/07/2019

Completed

Clexa movie AU. Notting Hill is one of my favourite movies and I couldn't stop picturing in my head the character of Hugh Grant as Lexa and Julia Roberts as Clarke. We will never have enough Clexa stories and I'm very fond of cheesy rom-com. Unfortunately, we don't have a large number of same sex romances in Hollywood.

The life of a simple bookshop owner (Lexa) dramatically changes when the 'it' actress of the moment, the gorgeous Clarke Griffin, decides to visit a pintoresc bookshop in Notting Hill.
