Leksa kom Trikru, Commander of the Thirteen Clans, had two weaknesses: her love for her people, and her love for Clarke Griffin of the Sky People. However, due to the closeness of Wanheda's ties to Heda, it has been many years since either weakness was threatened. Instead of war the people of the Coalition come together in Polis in celebration of their continued alliance.

Last update: 05/05/2016

Lexa Woods is a political science journalist working for the LA Times. Her schedule includes traveling all over the country and interviewing small and big politicians to get the story before anyone else. Stubbornly intelligent and kind of pretentious, Lexa has never made time for anyone in her life except for her best friend, Anya.

Clarke Griffin is the museum curator at the new Arkadia Museum of Modern art. She lives by the moment, even if that moment leads to disastrous results. The source of her happiness is routed in art, specifically when she makes art. Her best friend Raven encourages her defying conventional life styles, and together they make a powerful duo. But when their paths cross (likely due to the fate of the universe) both have a lot to figure out as extreme opposites of one another. Clarke Griffin and Lexa Woods are simply two girls from other worlds. And these worlds are inevitably colliding.

Meet Alexandria Jasmine "Lexa" Woods, age 27: As Hollywood's sweetheart and official legal guardian of one Sofia Woods, Lexa has to learn the hard way how to juggle with two drastically different facets of her reality. Struggling to keep up with many long hours on set while taking care of a young teenager doesn't let her much space to even entertain the idea of a love life.

Meet Sofia Brooklyn Woods, age 15: Younger and the only sibling of the entertainment industry's darling, Sofia is a determined teenager whose favourite place on Earth is on the ice. Much too clever for her older sister's taste, Sofia's sharp wit and acute perceptiveness is bound for trouble.

Meet Clarke Griffin, age 25: Stubborn, driven and down to Earth, Clarke Griffin is one of the most promising students of her class and has everything it takes to one day be a fine doctor. With her caring heart and kind eyes, some would think it nearly impossible not to fall in love with her.

When their two polar opposite worlds collide and connect in the form of a dark-haired and blue-eyed 15 year old teenage girl, what's to happen?

Of Love and War: An Odyssey

a: Sosh_022

27/06/2020

In progress

Based on the game Assassin's Creed Odyssey.

Sparta and Athens are at war.

Clarke is a misthios (mercenary) with a complicated past. When she was young, her family was torn apart, scattering them across all of Greece. Now that she's all grown up, she's determined to bring her family back together. She has to kill some people to do it though and catches the attention of both Spartans and Athenians alike. Secretly Spartan by blood, can Clarke stay neutral or will she be forced to choose a side in this war?

Lexa is an Archon (leader) of Athens, and their greatest military leader. Recently however, Athens has been suffering more and more military defeats and it's all because of this one nosy misthios.

Aka Lexa tries to kill Clarke. But then they meet. And they fall in love. But war and responsibilities get in the way. Sound familiar?

Standing in front of the mirror, Clarke shook her head. She couldn't believe she was about to do this.

She rubbed the thin lace between her fingers, letting it fall over her small baby bump, either side of the babydoll framing her stomach. She supposed she didn't look bad--it was a cute babydoll, lacy and black. It suited her well, standing out against her pale skin and framing her curves.

She figured it was now or never, really.

She has one mission, do everything in her power to preserve Lexa's legacy, to save all of their people. She didn't plan on it being so hard, on finding a new enemy to fight, nor did she plan on having a ghost from her past return.

The one ghost that haunts her every living moment.

The one that she thought she had lost forever.

The one that she loved more than her own life.

Lexa's voice startled Clarke's thoughts from spiraling even further into the black hole that was her broken, gaping heart. "Do we know each other?"

Clarke sighed and her lips trembled against her will. It was hard to keep her tears at bay, but she quickly wiped them away the second they fell onto her cheeks. "Yes."

Lexa knew that much. She also had a feeling they were close, judging by the way Clarke was looking at her – or barely looking at her. "How did we meet?"

Clarke laughed, a hearty laugh that even managed to make the edges of Lexa's lips pull upwards into a thin smile. This was going to take all day and night.

Lexa is not particularly interested in watching the Sky People make drunken fools of themselves, but there are certain things about the Commander a person must understand. The first is that some days she is weary--so tired of fighting she thinks she will say yes to any request made of her (unless that request is made by Indra, because it will most likely end with someone's head on a pike and it really would not behoove her or any under her command should she stoke the Sky People's fear of them any further). The second is that her heart is not nearly as dead as she wants everyone to believe it is, as she wants to believe it is. The third is that there is a smile, found only on the lips of one person in the world, so rare it is worth all the steel and wood and cloth in the land of all the twelve clans.

Lexa would do anything for that smile.

Opening the door to her office, Lexa steps inside with apologies falling from her lips. "Ms. Griffin, I'm really sorry for keeping you waiting. I had some hiccups in my morning, I'm usually much more punctual than this."

The woman settles her phone down and straightens up, lengthening her spine before getting up. All Lexa see is blonde hair neatly combed falling over one shoulder, and she looks away for a moment, quickly putting her bag and planner away on a table by the entryway before meeting her new head of finances.

"There's nothing to worry about. I'm sure you had a difficult morning," the words find Lexa before she looks up and her blood turning into ice, little crystals keeping her heart from beating.

That voice.

Lexa knows that voice.

Clarke Griffin thought that loving Lexa in the light was going to be easy. She couldn't have been more wrong. Once she concluded her studies, the young artist began to create her own path, yet success was far from reaching her. Clarke was frustrated, and most of all, she was envious of the attention her wife had garnered, whilst the madness that was being married to the popular writer was starting to get to her. Clarke couldn't feel more alone.

Lexa Woods made a promise to love Clarke in the light, but as of lately, her promises were being broken one after the next. A life that she never asked for engulfed her, and now, as Alexandria Woods became the object of affection of millions of fans worldwide and professional responsibilities drowned her, Lexa felt lost in the dark.

With their marriage on the line, can these two women find their way back to each other's light or their love will disappear in the dark? What is for certain is that this will be our last time between the sheets.

Our little secret

"Someone at this club recognized O and called the cops." Raven explains, hoping Clarke will get the urgency of this. It's a messy situation. "We have to go right now. The cops can be here in like ten minutes or something and then we'd be in deep shit for those fake ID's and for drinking." Getting caught is not a part of her plans.

Clarke's eyes widen. She had warned Octavia and Raven that this could be a bad idea and sadly this is proving her right, although thanks to Lexa, being here has been great while it lasted. "Ugh, okay, let's go." She knows they'll have to hurry to leave, because her mother can't know about this. It's unfortunate that their night is ending like this, it really kills the mood to have to run away all of the sudden.

Lexa gasps at hearing the conversation between Clarke and that girl. "Fake ID's?" It dawns on her what that means. "Wait, you're not twenty-one?" She should have known the blonde looked too young to be here, but since Clarke was in this club and drinking, she assumed the blonde would have been twenty-one. "Please tell me you're not underage." At the very least she's hoping for that, because right now this sounds disastrous and not promising at all.

Love is weakness, Lexa's always known. Dreams and the skills of past lives are nothing to brag about, not if they mean her nightmares are really prophesies. Better to be crazy. Because the alternative is shark-fanged monsters walking the Earth, pretending to be people. They'll kill her when they find her. Run and they'll go after anyone she cares about. Okay, fine. That only meant Lincoln, and her brother had long since escaped to the Marines.

Their father's death reunites them. Come with me. We'll start over. Linc has built a new life in Montana. So can she. But new places risk new attachments. Love may doom her.

And why this town? Why her?

Across lives and centuries, they've always been destined to find each other. This time is different.

Clarke growled and turned towards the people being herded away from the wreckage, in the center of a field of debris, panels of metal and bags and strips of clothing everywhere. She couldn't run, but she limped as quickly as possible towards the group. "Everybody listen to me! I'm an EMT, if you're in need of immediate attention move to the left, if not, move to the right.
