Few Americans knew much about the small, poor, heavily-forested country of Trigeda, not until well into its bloody civil war. When the fighting and the floods of refugees spilled over the borders to its wealthier neighbors, it finally provoked a UN peacekeeping mission in response. Still, many of the kids at Clarke's high school probably wouldn't have been able to find Trigeda on a map—even after some of the refugees began arriving in Arkadia.

Clarke herself only paid attention to the newcomers when the teenaged ones started showing up in her classes, and when her science teacher assigned her to work with one of them on a project. Specifically with Lexa kom'Trikru, the girl who seemed to be the unofficial leader of the Grounder students, who stalked around school like she ran the place.

Clarke wasn't a big fan of Lexa's. And the feeling seemed to be mutual...

Enemies to lovers AU. Kind of a lowkey Castle!AU that no one really asked for. It's Clarke and Lexa talking about how they met and how their relationship went from "I can't stand you, why are you here?" to "I love you and I can't imagine my life without you". Part 2 of Loving you in the light & dark

Clarke Griffin is giving all her heart and soul in her studies to become an art major. After being left with a broken heart, Clarke has only her art and her two best friends to find solace. Filling herself with hate and anger for the betrayal of the woman who changed her world forever, Clarke will try to forget, to move on and erase once and for all every memory Lexa left.

In her path she will find a mysterious writer who will remind her what she used to have with Lexa.

Lexa Woods left her heart in a mountain. The stoic former English literature teacher buried herself in her work at Polis Magazine. The column "Between the Sheets" of her alter ego, Alexandria, had garnered the attention of millions of readers nationwide, particularly a sassy big mouthed fan who tests her patience every time she can.

Lexa has tried to move on but she cannot forget the memories of her former student with those sky blue eyes that were imprinted in her mind and soul; she knows there won't be anyone else for her, only Clarke.

Can Clarke and Lexa remember when they used to love each other in the dark so they can move on into loving each other in light?

Or this is another story meant to be kept between the sheets?

In another life, i would have loved to be her's. In another life we would dance together in the rain. I would tell her i love her in some cheesy way after a dinner and movie because lets not forget I'm only 15. I would introduce her to my family and with big smiles they would give her a big warm hug and welcome her into the family.

But that isn't my life. I love her, but being with her is risky. It could get her hurt. In this life Its hard to dance when you body is constantly bruised and battered, when your immune system is relatively weak because you really haven't healed from the last beating and another one is added to the last. In this life to love her is to risk my life and her safety. In this life introducing her to my 'family' could ruin her. It doesn't matter really I don't think one could call these people my family. I love her that is all that matters.

Part 1 of Run on Gasoline

Clarke and Lexa did not meet under the best of circumstances. It also didn't help that they're both stubborn as hell and, given the chance, would never back down from a fight. But fate has a funny way of bringing people together. So they find themselves on the road, running away from their problems, hoping to get somewhere while heading nowhere in particular.

Starts off as a sort of modern college AU but is really a road trip fic. Somewhat inspired by a novel called "Invisible Monsters" and a bunch of other random shit. This is a G!p Lexa fic because everybody is apparently doing one, and I happen to really like 'em.

A/N: This work is now newly polished and has its own Spotify playlist called Run on Gasoline \(The Playlist\) with songs mentioned here and others that I think fit the fic.

We may meet again, Clarke Griffin, but when we do, you will not run with me. No one can run with me for long, because eventually they are taken down, exhausted by the journey, wary from the dangers my running path takes, or another slower runner picks them off at a distance far behind us. I wish someone could keep up with me for forever.
