Ugh, it's That Time of Year

a: awkwardrainbow

09/11/2019

In progress

There is no one Clarke gets along with less than Lexa Woods. Normally when it comes to rivals you are not forced to spend every holiday with them, let alone a room with one singular bed. But Lexa Woods and her siblings spend every holiday with Clarke and her family and what's Christmas without a persistent rivalry and constant competition? At least, this holiday seems to be shaping up the same as every year until the Blake's arrive changing Lexa's normal un-bothered attitude to something different and new that Clarke isn't used too.

Will they spend the holiday at each others throats as usual, or will new guests force out new confessions that change the way Clarke and Lexa communicate forever?

This fanfiction sets place after season 4 - exactly 6 years and 7 days after the deathwave.

While Octavia & the clans are still in the bunker, not sure if it is safe to leave already, Clarke waits for the safe return of the dropship with her friends inside. Well - actually Clarke waits for anyone to show up. She's been alone – except that little girl, Madi.

But how did Clarke manage to survive the last years?

Who is the little nightblood and why does she remind Clarke of Lexa all the time?

Is the big dropship full of enemies or did Raven manage to bring them home safely?

Will they all meet again?

And why does Clarke have the feeling that something - or somebody? - has watched and protected her the whole time?

Let's find out together!

Lexa Woods is new to the town Shady Oak. Her first day in town she's forced to save a girl in distress, only find out that same girl is one of the most popular girls in school and is now on said girl's radar. Lexa will try her best to pretend she's unaffected by this bodacious blonde but sometimes people are more persistent than she'd like. It'll be a roller coaster as Lexa moves on from a loss, but Clarke will prove to be more than able to save her.

She can't get off the train and still has 45 minutes left. She knows her Omega has now chosen who she wants as her Alpha, but Lexa can't allow it. She has Costia at home. But as the train gets closer and closer to her stop, it gets harder and harder to resist the woman's tantalizing scent. The woman seems to notice too and has no qualms about making her presence known to the delicious smelling Omega. Lexa thinks she can resist her until her stop, but can she really make it in time to get home and ride out her early heat with Costia or is Clarke's smell too strong for her to resist?

Until I met you, the world was a darker place. Until I met you, I didn't see the hidden colours of nature, the warmth of the sun beaming through the window on my face. Until I met you, I wasn't really living... only surviving.

Lexa met Clarke when she was 11 years old, both of them being sorted in to the same house at Hogwarts. She tried to build up walls around the exuberant girl but will that really prevent Lexa from being hurt again? Or should she risk it and let the intriguing blonde in?

Clarke was 11 years old when she met the small, shy girl with the piercing green eyes. She was mysterious and left a deep, aching curiosity behind. Who was she? And what had happened to her that she was so closed off?

Will Clarke be able to open Lexa up and show her that there was more to life than just surviving?

"Nope," I huffed, "There is no way I'm letting you do that. You are not dying on me"

Clarke Griffin uses the extent of her medical abilities to save the Commander. Surprising, it pretty simple to operate on the bullet wound with the available materials at the time. As Lexa is healing, Clarke goes out and fixes everything that was Pike and the Arkers. Her influence on both the Grounders and Skai people proves to be more than enough to stop the anarchy. Clarke snorted out a laugh in her ear, probably just as bored as she was, considering she was watching the same woman from down the scope of a sniper rifle. Octavia figured she should count herself lucky, at least she was in a heated car while Clarke was on a roof in midtown New York in late November.

"Said sexy teacher is in danger, Octavia, we don't just do this for shootouts and action." Raven commented down the coms. She was probably the most comfortable of the four of them, sitting on the derelict subway station they called home in front of her computer.

"And said mediocre white boy is shifty," Lexa murmured, peering down at the screen of her camera.'

In progress

Clarke was born on the ground and was abandoned by her parents after her 6th birthday. She is found by Heda Sojin (the Heda before Lexa) who decides that she might be of some use in the future. He decides to make Clarke into a personal assassin and protector for the next Heda and he trains her alongside the night bloods in Polis. Clarke quickly becomes the best of the group, working to prove that she deserves to be there. Lexa is curious of the beautiful blonde who beats her in sparring matches everyday, but she is never brave enough to talk to her.

When Heda Sojin dies in battle and Lexa ascends as the new Heda, she is informed of Clarke's position as her protector. On the brink of war with both the mountain and Azgeda, Clarke has her hands full protecting her Commander. But what happens when Clarke starts to develop feelings for the very person she is supposed to be objective towards? What about when Lexa starts to question her relationship with Costia in favor of her guard who is more stoic than even Lexa herself?
