Katherine Sands has provided security for Hollywood stars, big-name musicians, and world-renowned athletes. Her new job has her working on the set of Fear the Walking Dead, providing security for an actress named Alycia Debnam-Carey. While most of her jobs have been anything but ordinary for a former Marine who was more used to spitting out mouthfuls of sand than rubbing shoulders with Hollywood royalty, this one is especially challenging as she finds herself facing old demons and fighting to do what she knows is right. But as her feelings start to get the best of her, Kat finds herself torn between following orders and following her heart.

This romance borrows names from real people, set during the filming of the second season of Fear the Walking Dead. All events in this work are fictional.

I was completely embarassed. My mouth was with that famous bitter and metallic taste of alcohol after a night of excesses, my head still dizzy, and the confused thoughts -all so known from the morning after hangover- came even more intense that I've ever remembered. My eyes burned so bad that I was on the plane with huge sunglasses, trying to maintain the posture despite the weakness and the nausea that were taking over me. Until this morning of January 24rth-2016, I considered hangover(the one that knocks you down) to be the worst sensation anyone could experience, but honestly? The phisical symptoms weren't bothering me as much as the moral ones right now.
